The New Grinder Blog

Grinder Productions has entered the Blogosphere! The blog, affectionately entitled "Grinder's Grumblings" can be found at <http://grindersgrumblings.blogspot.com> and it's where you'll be able to find a TON of information about what's coming up this month and beyond. I'll be updating it almost every day, subscribe to the feed on the site and you'll never miss the latest information about what's going on. If you're on Facebook you might also want to check out my page there as well – I'm still working on it, but eventually you'll be able to browse and purchase the complete line of Grinder plays and books on the theatre, a complete line of Grinder clothing and accessories and... drum roll please... BUY TICKETS!!!! Yes, the future has arrived. I'll also be giving our website the "once-over" this month as well, so watch for some more exiting changes there too.

Cold Mean Season

That's the title of a song in a show I did a few year's back, and I have yet to hear a better moniker for winter in Canada (at least one that I can print in a family-friendly publication!). I'm pleased to report that the process of bringing Grinder out its own Cold Mean Season is well underway. We have a new business plan, a radically new marketing strategy and work is already beginning on some new productions for the spring and summer. We still have a lot to do, but as you can see by the few things in this newsflash we're already off to a flying start!

Auditions: Agatha Christie's The Hollow

We still have a limited number of spaces available for these auditions on Saturday, January 12th. Please get in touch with me soon if you are interested in being a part of this spectacular show. We're looking for six men and six women, ranging in age from 25 – 65. We are asking everyone to prepare a one-to-two minute contemporary monologue (comedic or dramatic) to share with us. This production is a perfect opportunity to showcase the best in local theatre talent – that's why we want you!
